Suspected 'puppy mill' busted

Vine Grove couple each charged with 89 counts of cruelty

By AMBER COULTER
acoulter@thenewsenterprise.com

About 100 dogs and puppies are being held as evidence against two Vine Grove residents who have been charged with 89 counts of second-degree cruelty to animals.

Brian McCarthy, 48, and his wife, Joyce McCarthy, 47, were arrested Wednesday on those charges, which are Class A misdemeanors and punishable by up to one year in jail, Vine Grove Police Capt. Dale Riggs said.

There is evidence the dogs were being sold, he said.

When officials and volunteers arrived, they found unsanitary conditions, a foul odor and a few dead dogs, including one in a cage with its nursing mother.

The dogs were without water and in a room that was about 80 degrees, Riggs said.

Officers received a request for assistance from Hardin County Animal Control and were told by Brian McCarthy they could search the mobile

E'town hires events coordinator

July 4 celebration on her agenda

By BEN SHEROAN

bsheroan@thenewsenterprise.com

Described by Elizabethtown Mayor Tim Walker as "very enthusiastic, very energetic," a 28-year-old Central Hardin High School graduate begins work next week as the city's first events coordinator.

The new position, which pays $38,000 annually, was offered to Sarah Vaughn, who staged the street-painting festival Via Colori the past two years as part of her job with the Advocacy and Support Center.

"I'm very excited," she said. "Really, really, really excited."

Vaughn was selected from a group of 47 applicants, Walker said Wednesday.

She said her involvement with Via Colori taught her many lessons she will use in the city position, including networking, fundraising and volunteer recruitment. While she describes it as her "stand-out experience," she said school, family and church functions also prepared her for this opportunity.

"I've been doing some kind of event-planning thing my entire life," she said. "Creating things from the ground up."

Her first task is a first-time event. Elizabethtown wants to stage a Fourth of July celebration to mark national independence and the city's establishment on that date in 1797.

The third annual Cruisin' in the Heartland car show is three weeks later and the fourth weekend in August is reserved at Freeman Lake Park for the Heartland Festival.

"It's very important that the events coordinator hits the ground running," Walker said.

With that heavy summer schedule, Vaughn expects to be on the go.

"I probably won't be sitting in my chair much," she said.

In addition to staging events, Walker said the new position will serve as a resource for the Historic State Theater, Heritage Council, Elizabethtown Sports Park and Kentucky High School Basketball Hall of Fame.

The job was created to fill a void in coordinating community events after the Hardin County Chamber of Commerce chose to redirect its energies toward business and industrial development.

Vaughn, who begins work March 28, recognizes the importance of Public invited to screening of 'American Teacher' film

By KELLY CANTRALL
kcantrall@thenewsenterprise.com

Local educational organizations hope a new documentary sparks a discussion about teaching as a career.

Several organizations are teaming up to host a viewing of the film "American Teacher" by Vanessa Roth from 6 to 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Performing Arts Center at T.K. Stone Middle School. Free seating is available by registering at www.americanteacherky.com.

The documentary is being shown around the state to start a dialogue about careers in education and the profession's impact on students and society. The film follows the careers of four public school teachers.

Stu Silberman, executive director of the Prichard Committee for Academic Excellence, said the committee encouraged viewings because it wanted to see the public begin talking about the loss of good teachers. People need to talk about what should be done to hold on to

Upton neighbors rally around ailing infant and her family

Harlie Brook Currie was expected to be stillborn.

After her birth, doctors expected she only would live for hours. When she exceeded that, they gave her days, then weeks.

Her mother, Tiffany Currie of Upton, thinks doctors gave Harlie a prediction of a 6-month lifespan because the tiny infant kept outliving all the bleak outlooks.

"She is one heck of a fighter," Currie said. "She kept beating all these odds that they were

Hardin Memorial Hospital's health fair offers screenings, meetings with medical professionals

By AMBER COULTER
acoulter@thenewsenterprise.com

Hardin Memorial Hospital representatives want to help area residents become more aware of their health and make sure they're sufficiently informed to make good decisions about it.

Hardin Memorial Hospital Health Expo 2012 presents an opportunity to learn about risk factors for health concerns and help attendees learn how to prevent such issues.

The fair also showcases health-related services in the area and provides visitors a chance to talk to health-care professionals about concerns they have.

The expo, "Spring into Health" is from 9 a.m.-noon Saturday in the fifth floor auditorium of the hospital. It is free and open to the public.

Spring is a good time to present provide attendees with a fresh perspective on their health and to showcase good lifestyle choices, said Karen Blaiklock, community and industry education manager for Hardin Memorial Hospital. Area residents are more likely to spend time outside in spring, she said, a time of year when they should consider how well they're pursuing New Year's resolutions.

"This is an opportunity for us to re-evaluate our health status," she said. "It's a good opportunity for us to look at where we want to go for the rest of the year."

The expo features free screenings including body fat, blood glucose, blood pressure, cholesterol and grip strength.

The screenings provide an opportunity to set goals for improvement and encourage those within healthy ranges to continue making healthy lifestyle choices, Blaiklock said.

There also will be informational booths on health-care issues and medical services, such as cancer care, diabetes management, digestive disorders, weight management, prenatal care, and hip and knee replacement.

Blaiklock said it's important for a regional health-care system to keep families informed about health-care services available in the community and provide them opportunities to speak with medical professionals.

"I think a lot of people don't know all the services that are available here in the community," she said.

Art bridges borders

Central Hardin High School graduate's portrait inspires correspondent's widow

The News-Enterprise

When Ebony Marshman heard in February about the death of foreign correspondent Anthony Shadid through Twitter, she was surprised how moved she was at the news.

Marshman, a senior visual arts student at Western Kentucky University and Central Hardin High School graduate, decided to paint a watercolor portrait of Shadid.

"I remember this time last year he was kidnapped in Libya," she said. "I paint portraits anyway and I knew there was a show coming up, so I chose to do a portrait of him. I worked from a mix of photos, not just one."

When she completed her portrait, Marshman posted a copy on Twitter, which she uses for news and networking. Through a series of retweets, the image found its way to Nada Bakri, Shadid's widow. Bakri then tweeted Marshman and asked for a hard copy of the portrait.

"I remember looking at the tweet and getting teary eyed because I was surprised that she saw it and that she wanted it," Marshman said. "I told her I would be honored to send her the original."

Marshman was surprised and moved by the attention.

"I feel like all my portraits are personal," she said. "I feel like its purpose is served if someone was able to appreciate it and be moved by it, especially her, of all people."

Knowing Bakri has seen the portrait has made Marshman a little self-conscious about the likeness, "like I could have done this or shifted some things around to make it look more like him exactly," she said. "I had to calm myself down. She saw something in it that she recognized."

"Portrait of a Man with Kind Eyes" is on display until April in the Ivan Wilson Fine Arts Center Gallery in the WKU student art competition. Marshman said the title comes from the warmth evident in the two-time Pulitzer Prize winner's coverage of the Middle East, most recently for the New York Times and Washington Post.

Shadid and three other journalists were kidnapped in March 2011 in Libya and held for six days.

"I remember watching the interview when they returned from Libya after being kidnapped and out of the four, he was the paternal one," she said.

Bakri lives in Lebanon but currently is in the U.S. promoting "House of Stone: A Memoir of Home, Family, and a Lost Middle East," a book Shadid wrote about his restoration of his great-grandfather's home in Lebanon. Shadid died at 43 in Syria of an apparent asthma attack before the book was published. Marshman hopes Bakri's tour will bring her close enough for them to meet.

Yvonne Petkus, associate professor of art at WKU, said she consistently has been impressed with Marshman and her compassion for others.

"This experience of connecting through her own creative efforts just reinforces the mental framework helpful for a future of making things happen through art," she said.

Proposal would clarify merged government

The question about a merger of city and county governments is, "How would it work?" The Senate State and Local Government Committee has passed a bill that would attempt to answer that question.

Rep. Jimmie Lee and Sen. Dennis Parrett, both Elizabethtown Democrats, brought the bill before the committee Wednesday, where it unanimously was approved. It was prompted by discussions in Hardin County.

Lee explained the bill would clarify how the process would occur. Parrett said the question ultimately would be left to residents. If, for example, a city council voted to join a merged government, but the residents voted against it in a referendum, it would fail.

The legislation is House Bill 189.

Senate panel votes to end Confederate pension fund

Less than 150 years after the Civil War, the Kentucky General Assembly is moving swiftly and decisively to remove a statute that provides pensions for Confederate veterans.

The measure, which passed the House of Representatives 98-0 on Feb. 29, was approved Wednesday by a 7-0 vote in the Senate State and Local Government Committee and sent to the Senate.

Koenig assured senators that no money was left in the fund and no one has been eligible to benefit from it for more than 50 years.

Another Kentucky community has passed a ban on synthetic marijuana.

Calloway County Fiscal Court members approved the measure Tuesday. It bans sale and possession of synthetic drugs that mimic the effects of marijuana.

The Calloway County Alliance for Substance Abuse Prevention helped create the ordinance after fielding calls for help when the substances were found in high schools. The ban targets products with labels such as "herbal incense."

Students, teachers and parents view one of the projects from Monday night's Hardin County Schools Technology Fair at Bluegrass Middle School.

HCS students prove tech-savvy

For The News-Enterprise

Hardin County Schools students use technology every day in classrooms. Many students carry technological skills home and use them for research, homework or to play educational games.

HCS students showcased the fruits of those skills Monday night at the second annual Hardin County Schools Technology Fair at Bluegrass Middle School.

"This is an absolutely wonderful opportunity for students from across the district to display some of the work they have been doing with technology both in and out of the classroom," Instructional Technology Director Tim Maggard said. "Students will display their technological artwork, video production, distance learning activities, multimedia presentations and so much more."

More than 180 students from 21 Hardin County schools participated.

"Students have prepared everything from school newscasts and technology repair to many, many classroom instructional strategies," Maggard said. "These students and teachers have worked extra hard to make this a fun event for everyone in the community."

Students from HCS middle and high schools assisted in design and implementation of the event. Students received first-hand experience in real-world technology as they worked on challenges including troubleshooting and running cables at the fair.

Area students shine in NFL Fuel up to Play 60 initiative

Program encourages good health practices

By KELLY CANTRALL
kcantrall@thenewsenterprise.com

Two students at T.K. Stone Middle School have found statewide and national success in the Fuel Up to Play 60 program, a product of the National Dairy Council and the National Football League.

Eighth-grader Beth Ann Winebarger was chosen as a 2012-13 student ambassador for Kentucky. She will attend a Student Ambassador Summit in July in Washington, D.C.

Sixth-grader Bradley Larrington will receive tickets to an NFL game of his choice through his entry in an essay contest in the Fuel Up program.

T.K. Stone received a grant to implement the program, which promotes physical fitness and healthy eating, at the school last year. In January, Winebarger began running a food store with another student after school — a store that sold apples, oranges, milk, Sun Chips and water to give students healthier options for snacks.

The health of her peers is a concern for Winebarger.

"I hate seeing on the

THE FACTS

Fuel Up to Play 60 is an initiative of the National Football League and the National Dairy Council. Participating schools are challenged with creating programs that achieve two goals: providing nutrient-rich food and allowing at least 60 minutes of physical activity a day.

news all the statistics about childhood obesity," she said.

Winebarger applied for an ambassador position at the local and state level. In the application, she discussed activities the school has organized to further the Fuel Up mission and what it plans for the future. She learned a couple of weeks ago she was chosen as a Kentucky ambassador.

"I was just really excited, and I couldn't believe it because I've never been to D.C.," she said.

At the summit, Winebarger will be exposed to more activity concepts and brainstorm her own ideas.

Faculty member Kerrie Bal will attend the summit with Winebarger.

"We were just elated,"

Bal said of the staff's reaction to Winebarger's selection. "We were beyond excited."

Larrington came to the Fuel Up program through a class assignment. He had to write an essay in which students were asked to write about their favorite football player and what they found inspiring about him. Larrington chose Michael Oher, a member of the Baltimore Ravens and subject of the film "The Blind Side" and the book "The Blind Side: Evolution of a Game" by Michael Lewis.

Larrington feels a connection to Oher because they're both adopted. Beginning in his toddler years, Larrington spent time in an orphanage and his essay discusses how lucky he felt to have parents who were willing to change their lives for him.

Along with two game tickets, he will receive transportation and a hotel stay. He's planning to see the Indianapolis Colts or the Tennessee Titans.

"I'm going to take my dad because he loves sports," he said.

Postal employees test carrying anthrax antidote

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE. — Postal employees in Louisville are participating in a program that would have letter carriers deliver an anthrax antidote if there is an attack.

Acting Louisville Postmaster Wendy English said more than 300 carriers have signed up to participate in the program.

Louisville Metro Department of Public Health and Wellness spokesman Dave Langdon said Louisville was chosen because of its experience in regional disaster drills.

The plan calls for postal carriers to deliver supplies of anti-anthrax medication to residential addresses within 48 hours of a biological attack.

Langdon said distributing medication in that time would prevent a major disaster, according to computer models.

"Other cities across the country will be watching closely to learn how to apply this model in their own communities," said Edward Gabriel, an official with the Department of Health and Human Services.

LAST CHAPTER

Dorothy Townsend, the first female staff writer for the Los Angeles Times' city section and the lone woman on a team of dozens of reporters, photographers and editors that won a Pulitzer Prize for coverage of the Watts riot, has died, the newspaper said Tuesday. She was 88.

After spending 10 years writing fea-tures for so-called women's pages, she insisted on being reassigned to local news, moving to a city room where women previously were thought too fragile for the tough stories and working conditions.

"I don't think any of us at that time realized what she had accomplished merely by making it to the newsroom," said Noel Greenwood, a former Times senior editor.

Myrna Oliver, a reporter who joined the Times in 1972, said even after Townsend switched to city news she "complained that her editors tried to keep her from going into the worst ar-eas. She said, 'I can run faster than any of those men in the city room.'" — AP

GEORGETOWN — Human traf-ficking is a topic that has drawn more at-tention in recent years with various re-ports showing the practice brings in $10 billion to more than $31 billion in prof-its worldwide.

The issue is the subject of a two-day conference starting Friday at George-

Georgetown associate psychology professor and conference chairwoman Regan Lookadoo said rural states such as Kentucky are extremely vulnerable to trafficking because it's a location where the practice isn't expected.

The conference is free to students or teachers, or $37.50 to the public.

Free GED test offered until June 30

Kentucky Press News Service

Two important education and workforce-credential tests will be free to eligible Kentuckians on a first-come, first-served basis through June 30 or until funds are expended.

The GED tests and assessments to earn a National Career Readiness Certificate are sponsored by Kentucky Adult Education, a unit of the Council on Postsecondary Education, and the Department of Workforce Investment, an agency of the Education and Workforce Development Cabinet.

Kentuckians interested in taking advantage of free classes and the time-limited free GED testing should contact the adult education center in their county to discuss how to get started.

To find the local adult education center, call (800) 928-7323 or visit www.KnowHow2GoKy.org.

"For many Kentuckians, earning a GED is a necessary first step toward college and a career with a family-sustaining wage," said Council on Postsecondary Education President Bob King.

The GED tests provide adults who did not finish high school with the opportunity to certify their attainment of high school-level academic knowledge and skills. Free GED classes are available through local adult education programs in all 120 Kentucky counties.

The NCRC is a national certification that indicates work readiness by administering three WorkKeys assessments: applied mathematics, locating information and reading for information. These specific workplace skills are needed in 77 percent of all jobs profiled for WorkKeys testing.

Missing teen found in Ky.

Kentucky New Era

A 15-year-old girl from Clarksville, Tenn., who was reported missing Thursday stayed with two men in Kentucky, according to a news release from Clarksville police.

Sierra Nicole Simpson called 911 on Tuesday from a gas station in Clarksville and told the dispatcher she was unharmed and wanted to speak to a detective.

Simpson told the dispatcher she didn't want her family to be notified.

Details about where she was staying are still sketchy, but Simpson told the detective she had planned to run away from home and took extra clothes with her Thursday when she went to school.

The release said Simpson wandered around after school until she was offered a ride by two men, whom she didn't know. The release said she had been staying with the men in Kentucky but decided to return to Clarksville on Tuesday after seeing news coverage about her disappearance.

Pinned man pulled from under cement truck

Harlan Daily Enterprise

A Coldiron man was seriously injured Tuesday after he was trapped under a cement truck on U.S. 119 at Tremont.

According to Kentucky State Police, Ward Scott, 59, was traveling south on U.S. 119 when he came upon a vehicle that had slowed for a flagger.

Scott swerved and lost control of the cement truck, which subsequently crossed the northbound lane and overturned across a guardrail.

Scott was ejected and pinned underneath the truck. The Harlan County Rescue Squad freed him.

Nearby work release prisoners comforted Scott before emergency crews arrived. The prisoners also helped pull Scott from beneath the truck.

Tax relief available for storm survivors

The News-Enterprise

Storm survivors in 21 Kentucky counties, including LaRue and Grayson, will have relief on some pending tax obligations.

Residents of counties designated for individual assistance by the Federal Emergency Management Agency are eligible for an extension of the April 17 deadline for filing 2011 individual income tax returns. Residents also can apply for extensions regarding making income tax payments and 2011 contributions to an individual retirement account.

In addition, the Internal Revenue Service will waive failure-to-deposit penalties for employment and excise tax deposits due on or after Feb. 29, or before March 15, as long as the deposits were made by March 15.

The Feb. 29 and March 2 tornadoes damaged local homes and businesses and devastated some eastern Kentucky communities.

The IRS, with cooperation from the Kentucky Department of Revenue, is postponing tax deadlines for Kentuckians who live or have a business in Bath, Campbell, Carroll, Grant, Grayson, Johnson, Kenton, LaRue, Laurel, Lawrence, Magoffin, Martin, Menifee, Montgomery, Morgan, Ohio, Pendleton, Rowan, Russell, Trimble or Wolfe counties.

A FEMA statement said late filing and payment penalties will be waived for those affected taxpayers in the designated counties who have a tax filing, payment or deposit due date — including an extended filing or payment due date — that falls within the postponement period. Kentucky's tax laws have no provision for waiver of interest.

Additional information may be found at www.irs.gov. Taxpayers seeking assistance with penalty waivers or more information can contact the Department of Revenue at (502) 564-4581. Kentucky honors federal extensions related to disaster relief for filing of income tax returns, including payment of tax due.

Taxpayers should label the top margin of tax forms filed under this relief provision in large, red letters with the words "February 2012 Storms."

Silence lets questions fester

ISSUE: Awarding of liquor licensesOUR VIEW: State should explain itself

As liquor licenses are put to use and package stores begin appearing in Hardin County's largest cities, it brings to mind an unanswered question in this ongoing cultural change.

Questions regarding conflicts of interest were raised when Radcliff City Council members, past and present, sought licenses. The spouse of another council member also was an applicant.

Both those applications offered business experience, complied with the state paperwork processes and suggested viable locations.

Both were passed over by the state Alcoholic Beverage Control officials.

The unanswered question: Why?

State ABC administrators defer questions to their attorney. The attorney provides no insight, saying only that court tests affirm the board has full discretion in decisions regarding licenses.

Having the power and authority is not an explanation. It does not provide guidance for future applicants and more significantly it continues to cloud the integrity of these applicants.

The liquor authorization was placed on the ballot by citizen petitions. It was approved by voters in all three of the county's largest cities in a special referendum. The council did not push this agenda but in each city elected officials have dealt with several delicate questions since the matter came to light.

In no instance has anything inappropriate or unseemly come to light regarding the council's activity. It's impossible to follow the state's logic if no reasons are offered.

A license was issued to a member of Hardin Fiscal Court who has a recurring business relationship with Radcliff's mayor. That obviously did not concern the ABC staff.

If it's simply wrong for a council member to seek a license, the state should say so.

It would be understandable if the state was uncomfortable with voting members of a city's legislative body. After all, these people could decide the employment future of the city's beverage control officer and others in law enforcement charged with ensuring the sale of alcohol is handled legally.

But by declining to offer any reasoning, the state has allowed suspicious minds to extend their gossip. It has done a disservice to people who have devoted themselves to public service and business success.

OUR READERS WRITE

Win the War Against Youth Violence

March 19-23 is National Youth Violence Prevention Week. It often seems we bring youths to the forefront in the context of problems and youth violence.

Many of us try to empower youths in our adult world and we should. However we also must recognize that youth already are empowered.

They have the power of imagination, drive, energy, life, physical ability, learning ability, resiliency, teamwork, morality and, most importantly, identity. In fact, through their own personal, unique, one-of-a-kind identity, they possess "super powers."

All youths, without exception, have all the power they need to overcome high hurdles they face on the outside and harder hurdles on the inside.

They already have all the tools necessary to lead peaceful lives and achieve what they want in this world.

It seems that many youths are violent to gain some perceived control in their lives or to gain empowerment. What they mistakenly find is that they already were empowered and committing violent acts is a power demagnetized.

They do not gain control, respect or time. When they use violence they lose them in abundance and at a crucial time of their lives, time that could be spent having "super fun" – fun without violence.

According to research, who are the greatest victims of youth violence? Youths of course. Youth violence is self-destructive to its core.

And who are the most often attacked? Those who commit violent acts.

Youths who live by the sword very often die by the sword. And 99 percent of serious violent crimes happened outside school jurisdiction.

Are drugs and alcohol factors in violence? Of course they are. They are identity killers. Abusing drugs and alcohol turns identity into mush. Goodbye "super powers."

Looking for respect? You got it. Everyone with an identity is worthy of total respect whether or not other people recognize it.

Another great thing about identities is that they all are equal no matter what someone looks like on the outside.

Teens also must fight hard to avoid violence because violence peaks for individuals in their 20s.

But adults might know something else about youths: They are courageous.

We encourage them to follow their passion and use the courage of their convictions. That's how you get something done in life.

So during National Youth Violence Prevention Week, we challenge youth not to first look to us older folks for a piece of our power, but simply look inside themselves.

Maybe if we continue to try to help them jump hurdles, they might throw a little of that youth power back our way. So stick around. There is a lot more super fun around the corner.

Coping with loss after a natural disaster

The storms and tornadoes that tore across the state March 2 impacted the lives of many Kentuckians. As cleanup continues, many individuals are dealing with the loss of loved ones, their homes and valuable possessions. When people experience loss, grief is a natural reaction.

People move through grief in several stages including denial, anger, bargaining, depression and acceptance. After a natural disaster, for example, people may refuse to believe or accept the destruction and devastation. Such denial helps to absorb the shock after the unexpected and allows victims to collect themselves as they seek ways to cope. While some victims may continue to suppress feelings, others may experience anger, rage, resentment, disbelief and even envy. Emotions common to the anger stage help to buffer the pain and provide something concrete to channel or hold onto.

AMY

After a disaster it is common to become lost in a maze of "If only ..." or "What if ..." statements. Victims want life to return to as it was, or they may dwell on the things that could have been and how wonderful life would have been if not for this unpleasant situation. While such thoughts can reveal the impact of the disaster and help with acceptance, these feelings also can lead to feelings of remorse and guilt and interfere with healing. To feel more in control of a situation, survivors may bargain or negotiate their way out of the hurt. For example, they may say, "God, if you get me through this, I will volunteer at the local homeless shelter." In this regard, bargaining allows survivors to re-frame a crisis into more manageable terms, and it can help victims cope with emotions.

Overwhelming sadness is the most widely experienced symptom of grief. During the depression stage, victims shed tears and even feel emotionally unstable. They may experience changes in energy, eating or sleeping patterns, moodiness or irritability, or feelings of helplessness and hopelessness. These depressive symptoms are normal responses to loss and necessary steps in the healing process. The intensity of these emotions should lessen with time.

Also with time, victims learn to accept and deal with the reality of their situation. While acceptance does not necessarily mean instant happiness, it does mean that survivors will find a way to move forward and maybe even grow stronger from the experience.

Victims of Kentucky's latest natural disasters likely will experience each of the grief stages, but they may not go through the stages in any particular order and may experience more than one stage at a time. Friends and family may experience different grief emotions at the same time, which can add stress to relationships and hinder one's ability to appropriately help someone cope with loss. By being familiar with the grieving process, victims and loved ones can better understand individual grief and recognize that the intensity of emotions during these times are about the loss that just occurred, rather than the relationship.

Many people who have trouble coping with loss need help, but don't reach out for it. In these cases as friends, neighbors or family members, it is important to be assertive in freely providing help. There are several ways to show care and concern in a time of loss:

- Provide affection. Affection and small deeds, such as a hug or kind words can go a long way and are appreciated more than people realize.
- Help people accept help. Offer to do specific things versus asking what can be done.

- Assist with seeking solutions and resources needed for coping.

- Lend a hand with daily life routines, such as meal preparation or child or pet care.

- Encourage dialogue. Talking can clear the way for people to confront their emotions.

- Listen. When listening, don't interrupt, offer advice or pass judgment.

- Encourage. Encouragement is important when helping people cope with loss.

For more information about coping with grief or helping others cope, contact the Hardin County Cooperative Extension Service.

Amy Hosier is a University of Kentucky Extension specialist in family life.

Marine says Corps kicking him out

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — An outspoken Marine critical of President Barack Obama says the Marine Corps is moving to kick him out.

Sgt. Gary Stein says he was notified Wednesday that the Marine Corps has charged him with using contemptuous words against the commander in chief and violating the Defense Department's guidelines barring troops from engaging in political activities.

Stein says the Corps is beginning the process to have him discharged.

giving her."

There have been struggles for Harlie, who began having difficulty breathing immediately after her Dec. 22 birth at Hardin Memorial Hospital.

Family friend Jana Highbaugh of Upton said it was obvious right away there was something wrong. Highbaugh was at the hospital after the delivery when nurses gathered around Harlie in the nursery and pulled down the curtain while they tended to a problem with the newborn.

"That was just indescribable, how that feeling was," Highbaugh said. "We didn't want to believe that what we were seeing was happening."

Harlie was sent to Kosair Children's Hospital in Louisville, where she was diagnosed with the life-threatening disorder Trisomy 18, also known as Edwards Syndrome.

The disorder is caused by a tripled 18th chromosome. Symptoms can include structural heart defects, kidney malformation, and breathing and feeding difficulties.

Tiffany said she hadn't expected the disorder, or that the 7-pound baby she expected to deliver actually would weigh 5 pounds, 1 ounce.

"It was a huge shock to everybody, the whole family," she said.

Harlie and her parents, Tiffany and Nathan Currie, have been in and out of hospitals since Harlie's birth. Doctors told them Harlie would have a long road, Tiffany said.

"We're just taking it day by day with her and slowly getting through it," she said.

Harlie's 5-year-old brother, Lane, sometimes tags along and loves to hold his baby sister.

The family was back at Kosair this week. On Tuesday, Harlie was breathing more on her own.

The care and medicines Harlie requires and the uncertainty of her situation caused Tiffany to leave her job at Dollar General and Nathan to drastically cut the hours he works and the number of miles from home he is willing to travel as a truck driver, Tiffany said.

"We're just doing what God's will is," she said. "We're just trying to give her the best life we can give her, even if it's in and out of the hospital."

The family's income loss led community members to organize a fundraiser to help defray expenses for Harlie's family as they spend all the time they can with the baby.

Members of Upton Baptist Church, Upton Civic Club, Friends for Harlie and other organizations and individuals are behind the benefit set for 5:30 p.m. Saturday at the Upton Community Building on College Street.

Planned activities include a chili supper, a cake walk, face painting and an auction. Donations of money and items to be auctioned will be accepted.

Donations also can be made by contacting Ashley Walters at 268-8993, or Kathy Williamson at 307-5224, or by making a direct deposit to an account set up for the family at West Point Bank in Upton.

Highbaugh said the community has rallied around the family because of dedication to the community and parents' ability to imagine themselves in the Curries place.

"Basically, the family knows that their time is limited, so they have chosen to take that time to spend with their child," said Highbaugh, a mother. "If I had a second chance with my baby in the hospital, I would want to spend every moment."

Tiffany said she and Nathan weren't surprised by the support they have received because they know how generous their friends and neighbors are.

She said they feel blessed, especially because times are hard for many people.

She is grateful for the time she is spending with her daughter.

"She's her own person," Tiffany said. "She's got one heck of a personality."

Tiffany said Harlie knows how to get attention at the hospital by disconnecting herself from monitors, bringing nurses running.

"She just grins at them," she said. "She's a gift from God, by all means. We call her our little angel."

VAUGHN: Working on a master's degree

"So many people love Cruisin', so many people love Heartland, so many people love this community," she said. "I think people will continue to help."

One potential volunteer resource is Rik Hawkins, who was the other finalist for the job.

The former chamber director, Hawkins created Cruisin' the Heartland and conducted a successful Heartland Festival around a welcome home for Vietnam veterans celebration.

While expressing disappointment in not being selected for the job, Hawkins stressed the importance of events in establishing a community's identity and quality of life.

Vaughn said Hawkins is "fantastic, great to work with" and she hopes to benefit from his experience.

Hawkins, who sent 30 pages of background and financial data regarding Cruisin' to the city, said he's willing to help but doesn't want to create an awkward situation professionally.

"I wish her nothing but the best," he said. "I have a strong desire to see all of these events succeed and new events created."

The job was offered to Vaughn last week but the formal announcement was delayed to accommodate the city's hiring process, which includes drug screening and background checks, which were completed Tuesday.

In the intervening time, news that two finalists remained in consideration led to public expressions of support for Hawkins. Bill Swope spoke at Monday's City Council meeting and the Elizabethtown Rotary Club approved a formal endorsement of Hawkins at its meeting Tuesday.

Hawkins expressed appreciation for the expressions of support. He said he was not behind any public effort to promote his candidacy.

"I didn't prompt them but I am grateful," he said.

Vaughn, who works weekends as a disc jockey at WQXE radio, has a communications degree from Lindsey Wilson College and is working on a master's in the same field at Bellarmine University.

The daughter of Greg and Pam Bolton, both of whom were raised in Hardin County, she came to live in Elizabethtown as a third grader and graduated in 2002 from Central Hardin. She is married to Todd Vaughn, originally from Sonora.

DEAR ABBY

Sorority experience enriches college life without hazing

Dear Abby: I would like to tell “Possibly Paddled Pledge” (Jan. 13) that joining a sorority was one of the best parts of college for me. It taught me about interpersonal communication, the importance of philanthropy and academics, and networking. I learned skills I would not have gained had I not joined.

My sorority had paddles. We decorated them with our symbols and Greek letters, and they were displayed on the wall. We never used them to hit anyone. Our national organization, as well as our university would have been furious. Hazing is illegal and should not be tolerated.

I say, give the Greek life a try, but if someone ever lifts a finger toward you, report her to your panhellenic organization and the dean of students immediately. Sororities are supposed to lift you up, not beat you down. – Jennifer in St. Louis

■ Dear Jennifer: Readers unanimously agreed paddling should not be tolerated, and stressed being a legacy does not guarantee acceptance or that a pledge will have a good experience in a particular sorority. My readers comment:

Dear Abby: My daughter currently is in a sorority, but her experience has been very mixed. She was not automatically welcomed by my sorority. She found the process to be difficult and judgmental. However, she did find a wonderful group of women in a different sorority.

As a sophomore this year, she is on the other side of recruitment (rush)

and again felt hurt by how rude some of the new girls were. “PPP’s” letter spotlighted the snobbish, elitist attitude that turns many eligible young women away from sororities. To say a group is the best-of-the-best and exclusive is offensive. I hope more girls will look beyond the glitz and glamour and give a second hard look to all of the groups. – Jane in Akron, Ohio

Dear Abby: My first month in college was wonderful. Then came sorority rush. What followed was hell. I got a paddle with the Greek letters, though it was only a “memento.” Far worse was the social fragmentation of the women there. We immediately began to segregate into our little pledge classes, wore pins that identified our group and were typecast from the very beginning.

After wrestling with this psychological social dilemma – even becoming an active member, which would preclude me from ever joining another sorority – I finally deactivated, switched to a much larger school with less emphasis on the Greek system and happily sailed through the rest of my college life with honors. – A Happy Independent

‘TWEEN 12 & 20

Why can’t boyfriend take no for an answer?

Dr. Wallace: I am now going through what most girls go through when they date one guy steadily – the pressure to have sex. When I continue to say no, he lays a “guilt trip” on me by saying that “all lovers make love.”

He keeps saying I’m cold and distant, and he would like me to be warm and sensitive. Dr. Wallace, I really like Jason, and he is a super neat guy, except for his sexual hang-up. How can I convince him when I say no, I really mean it? Why can’t he take no for an answer? – Becky, St. Catharines, Ontario.

■ Becky: Throughout life, you will be pressured by people to do certain things not for your benefit at all but for theirs.

In reality, people don’t like to be told no. When a person is told no, it means he can’t get his way; he can’t do something he wants. Two things usually happen. First, the person asks again, maybe in a slightly different way, and continues to ask until he is finally convinced the answer is going to remain no. Once that has finally sunk in, the person will accept the decision with a certain degree of frustration or disappointment.

A sincere discussion of the reasons why you are not going to have sex is a much more effective approach. If he does not want to accept your reasons and continues to be sexually aggressive, tell him goodbye and wish him well.

THE VILLAIN IS MOTHER NATURE. Dr. Wallace: Why do 11-year-old boys act so stupid and so very immature? It seems like all they ever do is make noise, make a pest of themselves and gorge their stomachs. Every night, I thank the good Lord he made me a girl. – Emily, Hobart, Ind.

■ Emily: The boys can’t help the way they act. Actually, the villain is Mother Nature who decided girls would mature both mentally and physically faster than boys, but she shows compassion and permits the boys to rise to the level of the girls around age 15.

WISE PERSON SHOULD NOT MAKE SAME MISTAKE TWICE. Dr. Wallace: Last week, I broke a promise and caused a good friend to break up with her steady boyfriend. She told me a secret, and I promised her I “wouldn’t tell a living soul,” but I did. I’m sorry about the hurt I’ve caused my friend, and I have told her so. I hope she understands I’m human and humans make mistakes. What can I do now to make my friend forgive me? – Arlene, Ames, Iowa.

■ Arlene: You have apologized and that was the noble thing to do. You can do no more. If your friend forgives you, it will be that she feels your apology was sincere. But that’s her choice.

But this also is a learning experience for you. You’ll be making mistakes all of your life. A wise person shouldn’t make the same mistake twice.

JROTC BRIEFS MOWW AT FEBRUARY MEETING

The Fort Knox Chapter of the Military Order of the World Wars held its monthly meeting Feb. 21 at its clubhouse at Fort Knox.

The program for the meeting was cadets from the Fort Knox High School JROTC program. Chief Akin, senior coordinator of the Fort Knox JROTC program, brought three cadets; senior Breezy Jackson, senior Hyrum Dean and junior Troy Boxrucker, as the meeting’s guest speakers. The cadets presented themselves, explained the duties of their JROTC positions, stated their future goals and provided their opinion on the value of the JROTC program to their personal and academic life. This was followed by questions from the chapter members. Their presentations and responses were impressive, praised the value of their JROTC experience, and provided renewed confidence in the positive outlook of youth. For their informative and entertaining presentations, they were each presented a Chapter Certificate of Appreciation.

The Fort Knox Chapter interfaces with all the JROTC units in the county and finds that the above mentioned attributes are present in each of the elements and reflects highly on the value of the JROTC program and the impact it has on its cadets.

ROTARACT CLUB HEARS FROM AREA DAIRY FARMER

Denise Jones, like many of the Rotaract Club of Greater Hardin County members she spoke with March 6, is dedicated to her job and family, wants to be a good neighbor and tries to prepare for the future challenges she might face. But unlike most, her job requires her to work seven days week, 52 weeks a year. Jones is a dairy farmer and one of the people behind the wholesome dairy foods consumers enjoy.

The Jones family owns Coleman Crest Dairy near Loretto. They milk a herd of Holstein cows three times a day, every day. On the farm, corn silage double cropped with wheat silage also is raised. To dairy farmers, the ultimate reward is knowing their actions help create a healthy, abundant and affordable food supply for this community.

Dairy farmers are dedicated to their cows and the land they call home – and the land their neighbors call home. They work hard to keep the water and air clean and to protect the land, continuing many proven practices of previous generations but also putting to use many techniques that were unknown just five years ago.

“Yes, our family’s livelihood depends on us making sure our natural resources are nurtured. More importantly, the future of our children’s families and the world depends on us making sustainable choices now,” Jones said. Because of this commitment on the dairy farm, people can count on wholesome dairy foods produced while sustaining the environment.

Southeast dairy farmers protect their land, care for their animals and produce high quality milk and dairy foods for their families and yours. To learn more about dairy farmers and the milk they produce, visit www.southeastdairy.org, www.facebook.com/sedairy or Twitter @sedairy.

ELISE AMENDOLA/The Associated Press

A home that was for sale in North Andover, Mass. Sales of previously occupied U.S. homes rose in January to the highest pace in nearly two years, a hopeful sign ahead of the spring buying season.

U.S. home re-sales have best winter in 5 years

The DEREK KRAVITZ

AP Real Estate Writer

WASHINGTON — U.S. home sales are gradually coming back. A mild winter and a stronger job market have helped boost sales ahead of the crucial spring buying season.

The past two months made up the best winter for sales of previously occupied homes in five years, when the housing crisis began. And the sales pace in January was the highest since May 2010, the last month buyers could qualify for a federal home-buying tax credit.

February sales dipped only slightly to a seasonally adjusted 4.59 million, the National Association of Realtors said Wednesday. That's 13 percent higher than the sales pace last July and just below the revised 4.63 million in January.

Ian Shepherdson, chief U.S. economist at High Frequency Economics, said the lower February's numbers "should not detract from the key point, which is that sales are trending upward."

The sales pace remains far below the 6 million economists equate with healthy markets. And the number of first-time buyers, who are critical to a housing recovery, continues to lag normal levels, while foreclosures remain high.

Still, Summer Greene, a real estate agent in Fort Lauderdale, said she's getting multiple offers for listings. That's been rare since the housing market went bust in South Florida.

"People don't want to wait on the sidelines anymore and the change is very noticeable," Greene said. "There's definitely been a mood shift."

The median sales prices of homes rose for the first time in four months in February, to $156,600. And the supply of homes on the market increased more than 4 percent in February to 2.43 million, which could signal that more homeowners became confident in the housing market.

There have been other signs of improvement in the depressed housing market.

Homebuilders have grown more confident in the past six months after seeing more people express interest in buying a home. In February, they requested the most permits to build homes since October 2008.

Mortgage rates are near record lows. And the supply of homes fell in January to its lowest level in seven years.

A lower supply helps push up prices, which lures sellers onto the market and generally improves the quality of homes for sale. Rising prices also boost sales because buyers want to invest in homes that are appreciating in value.

A key reason for the brighter housing outlook is the job market has strengthened. From December through February, employers added an average of 245,000 jobs a month. The unemployment rate has fallen to 8.3 percent, the lowest in three years.

Still, economists caution the damage from the housing bust is deep and the industry is years away from fully recovering.

Sales among first-time buyers, who are critical to a housing recovery, fell slightly last month to 32 percent of all purchases. That's down from 33 percent in January. In healthy markets, first-time buyers make up at least 40 percent.

And homes at risk of foreclosure made up 34 percent of sales, down only slightly from 35 percent in January. In more stable markets, foreclosures make up less than 10 percent of sales.

For the past few years, the market has been saturated for years with foreclosures. That has put downward pressure on prices and driven away buyers.

Many can't qualify for loans or meet higher down-payment requirements. Even those with excellent credit and stable jobs are holding off because they fear home prices will keep falling.

Sales are measured when buyers close on homes. Some deals have been scuttled before the closing after banks declined mortgage applications, home inspectors found problems, appraisals showed a home was worth less than the bid, or a buyer lost a job.

Sales were mixed across the country. They rose on a seasonal basis 1 percent in the Midwest and 0.6 percent in the South. They dropped 3.2 percent in the West and 3.3 percent in the Northeast.

DEBT ADVISER

What are the time limits on old, bad debt?

Two readers raise questions about whether there's a time limit on old, bad debt.

Dear Debt Adviser: I have a charge-off account on my credit report. The question I have is that the account has been paid, but the account still is being reported as a charge-off and with a zero balance. The original time frame for the loan has not ended yet. Is this accurate for them to report the account still as a charge-off, even though the debt has been paid? — Steve

Dear Debt Adviser: Does the statute of limitations pertain to the original debt, or does it restart every time the debt is sold? My debt is not from credit cards, it is from regular bills such as towing and utilities. — Dianne

■ Dear Steve and Dianne: Many people confuse the time frames for keeping a debt on a credit report vs. collecting a debt using the courts or the statute of limitations.

Steve, the charge-off will remain on your credit report for seven years. The Fair Credit Reporting Act states that negative items will stay there from the first date of delinquency resulting in the charge-off. Typically, a debt is charged off once it is delinquent for 120 to 180 days. The original time frame for a loan — such as five years, in the case of a car loan — has no bearing on the length of time the delinquency will be reported in your credit file.

By paying off the debt, even though very late, potential lenders will be more willing to lend to you in the future than if you still had an unpaid account.

However, for purposes of credit reporting, the fact remains that you allowed the account to reach the point of being charged off. On your credit report, your account will show up as a black mark until the seven-year reporting period has expired. Just so you know, the negative account will have less impact on your credit and score over time and as you continue to pay other bills when they're due.

Dianne, the statute of limitations clock is completely different from the seven-year rule credit reporting companies use. The statute determines whether a debt is collectible in a legal proceeding, such as a court suit or garnishment. The clock starts running from the date of the last payment made on the original account.

Statute of limitations laws differ in each state, so you will need to check how those in your state apply to your debt. Regardless of how many different collection agencies have purchased your debt, your state law is the sole determinant of when this clock starts or stops. In most states, the statute of limitations clock resets with any payment made on the account. Other actions can affect the clock in some states.

To sum up, credit reporting laws pertain to how long an accurate negative item can be reported on a credit report, and statute of limitation laws apply to how long a debt can be legally collected using the courts. In most states, a negative account can be reported on an account for longer than it can legally be collected in court. But that's not the case in my home state of Rhode Island, where old debts are collectible for more than a decade.

Hewlett-Packard to merge printing, PC divisions

Hewlett-Packard Co. will combine its printer and PC divisions to save money, part of the technology company's effort to turn around its business.

The move announced Wednesday comes at a time when sales of printers and ink, once HP's lifeblood, are falling as people share documents and photos online. HP, the world's No. 1 maker of personal computers, also is facing declining PC sales as people turn to tablet computers and smartphones.

The combined unit will be led by Todd Bradley, the executive vice president of the PC group since 2005. Vyomesh Joshi, the head of the printing group, is retiring after 31 years with HP.

The company said combining the units will increase productivity and efficiency, while streamlining customer support and the company's supply chain.

From wire reports.

MARKETWATCH WEDNESDAY

U.S. STOCKS CLOSE MIXED, CONTINUING BUMPY WEEK. U.S. stocks closed mixed Wednesday after a quiet trading day that left the indexes little changed.

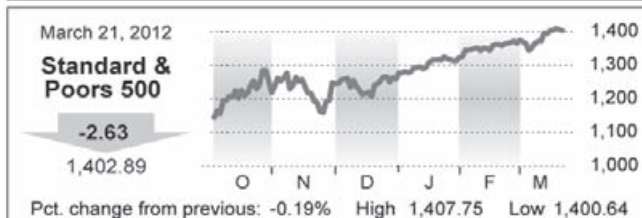

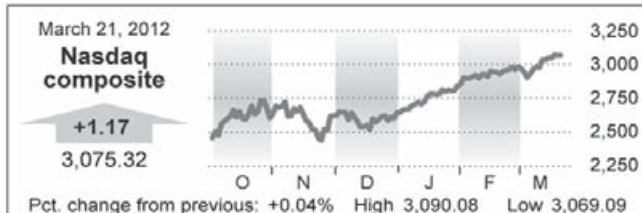

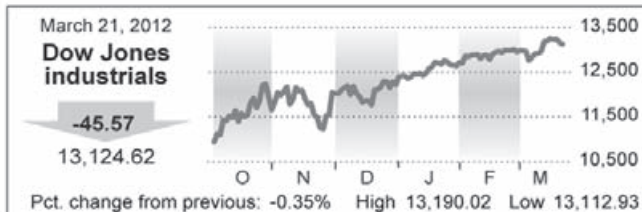

Without strongly positive or negative news to move the market, stocks meandered sideways for most of the day. John Manley, chief equity strategist for Wells Fargo Advantage Funds, said the lack of market-moving events generally is good for stocks. Traders are increasingly confident the risks hanging over the market from Europe, oil prices and China will blow over, he said.

my week with MARILYN not worth the hype

bowsley@thenewsenterprise.com

"My Week with Marilyn" has received several nods during awards season but didn't make it to local theaters. It's now available for rental.

The film chronicles young Colin Clark's experience working on the set of the film "The Prince and the Showgirl" starring Marilyn Monroe and Sir Lawrence Olivier.

Michelle Williams ("Blue Valentine") received an Academy Award Best Actress nomination for her role as Monroe and won a Golden Globe for Best Performance by an Actress in a Motion Picture - Comedy or Musical.

Her performance is passable, but she didn't really disappear into Marilyn as many had said. She does a lot of wiggling and staring off in a ditzzy glance but leaves the film with the appearance of someone trying to play Monroe instead of being Monroe.

There's a sharp contrast in her performance.

In scenes showing her life off set, she is believable as Monroe; in the scenes where she is shooting scenes of "The Prince and the Showgirl," she misses a bit. The reason she falters is because audiences know the Monroe in that film and there's something missing in Williams' performance.

So I'm kind of torn on her performance. At times it's OK, at other times it's just some wiggling.

Zoe Wanamaker as Paula Strasberg, left, and Williams as Monroe.

Williams has become a Hollywood darling, but at times the former "Dawson's Creek" star's performances are somewhat overrated.

Kenneth Branagh ("Valkyrie"), also nominated for his work, plays a grumpy and aged Olivier completely annoyed by the less talented Monroe. Eddie Redmayne (TV's "Pillars of the Earth") plays the young Clark being pulled into Monroe's confidence and arms during her troubles shooting with Olivier.

It's nice to see Emma Watson outside of her "Harry Potter" role in this film and Dame Judi Dench ("J. Edgar") never fails to impress.

The movie takes audiences back to a romantic time in Hollywood and an old way of filmmaking with the grandeur of old Hollywood and actors with larger-than-life personalities.

I am a little confused as to why it was nominated for a Golden Globe in the Best Picture - Comedy or Musical category. It is neither a comedy nor musical.

Monroe comes out of the film a very sympathetic character, using others to chase her own insecurities throughout the film.

There are bits and pieces of "My Week with Marilyn" that are worthy of nominations, but the movie gets a little lost in the middle.

The small glimpse you get of the characters and studios of old Hollywood are interesting to a film buff, but this tale of Monroe's spiral during the production of "The Prince and the Showgirl" is not one I'm likely to watch again.

When a book is not a Nook

Technology continues to amaze me. With a few key strokes you can send a message to dozens of friends simultaneously anytime, day or night. Or you can engage in a conversation with someone across the world without long-distance charges by instant messaging.

You can even do the above via a smartphone or portable device.

Wondered whatever happened to Oingo Boingo? Me, either.

But the answer is at the fingertips of those who do.

Tons of other information is there, too.

You can find historical documents, how-to videos and even directions to virtually anywhere you want to go. You can shop without having to leave your sofa.

Want music? Download it.

Want a book? Download it.

But, as with anything, there are disadvantages to technology.

Just as quickly as they release the latest version of a smart phone it seems it becomes obsolete. A new one comes out offering better capabilities.

I hear the latest one makes your bed in the morning while brewing coffee, but that's an unsubstantiated rumor.

Cell phones have become less of a convenience and more of a luxury.

And PCs and other devices haven't slowed down, either.

Computers include more and more hard drive space and memory, to accommodate ever-expanding Web browsing, gaming and technological experiences. More and more information constantly is being provided online.

E-readers allow users to download and peruse the latest best-sellers anywhere and anytime they want.

But, again, there are some disadvantages to computers and e-readers. Sources can be questionable or downright unreliable. Viruses are rampant. Batteries run down and must be recharged.

Dropping or losing an e-reader can be a bit costly.

Somebody should come up with alternatives to computers, smartphones and e-readers.

In fact, I think I'm on the brink of some incredible inventions.

How's this:

Waiting for the batteries of your e-reader to recharge can be a pain. And what if Fido jumps up at you? Oh, no. There goes your e-reader crashing to the floor. Kerplunk.

There must be an easier way. There is.

Introducing the new aBook, a breakthrough in technology. Forget a battery that needs recharging or equipment that breaks or damages when you drop it. The new aBook never needs batteries and has a resilient frame that can withstand being dropped, even on uncarpeted floors.

The aBook allows readers to open to any page instantly and carry it just about anywhere.

Uh, oh. There's Fido, jumping up at you again. But look at that. The aBook can be knocked out of your hand onto a concrete floor, and you're not out $100. Just pick up aBook and resume reading.

The aBook comes in hardback or paperback.

And if you act now you'll get the aLibraryCard at no extra charge. That's right, now you can peruse and read a large selection of aBooks without having to download or buy them. You can even read aBook without any cost to you.

But wait, there's more.

Book reports on historical events can be tricky. In addition to hopping from website to website searching for information, you have to be sure the sources are credible. The aLibraryCard can help you there, too. That's right. With aLibraryCard, you have access to aSetOfEncyclopedias and other resources.

That's aBook with aLibraryCard, available at no cost. Or buy aBook separately.

Call your friends and tell them.

And if the battery in your smartphone is dying, try the aLandlinePhone.

N.C. 'mystery woman' could be from Kentucky

The Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Durham County officials are looking for help in identifying a woman who arrived in the area about two years ago without any identification and who has been diagnosed with catatonic schizophrenia.

The Herald-Sun of Durham reported that the woman originally gave her name as Jacqueline Fulton and said she was from Kentucky. But none of that information could be corroborated.

The woman has stopped speaking and is in the guardianship of the county Department of Social Services. The department wants to connect her with family or anyone else who can identify her.

DSS officials say the county is paying $1,800 a month for room and board at a family care home. Without identification, officials cannot get aid such as Social Security or Medicaid for her.

attention to this," he said.

Locally, Hardin County Schools, Elizabethtown Independent Schools, Kentucky Education Association and the United Way of Central Kentucky are sponsoring the screening.

After the film, there is a forum for the audience to react and ask questions, and then a call to action asking viewers to assist local schools, said John Wright, spokesman for Hardin County Schools.

Linda Lynch, a field staff member of KEA, said education always is a much-discussed issue, one that's vital to children and democracy.

"We're beating up on education, we're beating up on teachers," Lynch said. People should look to work to improve the system instead, she said.

"Teaching children involves a lot, and we need to pull together," she said.

Most everyone can recall a teacher who made an impression on them, Silberman said. People should think about what would have happened if that teacher had left the profession earlier, he said.

Hardin County Animal Control officers and PAWS volunteers begin sorting the many small dogs rescued Wednesday from a residence in Vine Grove.

DOGS: Animals not yet available for adoption

Riggs said an investigation is ongoing, and he expects additional charges to be filed.

Hardin County Deputy Judge-Executive Jim Roberts said a phone tip to animal control initiated the raid on the McCarthy residence.

The dogs were kept in a couple rooms built onto the back of the home, Roberts said.

"The odor was something that I wouldn't care to live in," he said.

Roberts said there was at least one dead puppy in sight when he visited the residence.

PAWS volunteer coordinator Debbie Anderson said volunteers were on the scene by about noon, less than an hour after she received a call asking for help with the rescue effort.

She saw dogs with tumors and illnesses and the living conditions were unsanitary, she said.

She saw two dead puppies, one at the bottom of a trash can and another in a cage.

"When they called me to round up the volunteers, I had no idea what we were getting into," she said.

The work wasn't nearly finished for volunteers and employees when the dogs were taken to animal con-rol at about 2:30 p.m.

Numerous small-breed dogs gazed out of crates that littered the concrete floor of the garage attached to the Animal Control shelter, where volunteers had carried them for processing. Some whined quietly, while others sat stoically.

Each dog was given a number, written on a temporary collar. The number corresponded with the gender and description of each dog. They were vaccinated, caged and fed.

PAWS Foundation President Deedie Layman contacted veterinarians to evaluate the animals' health, and sick dogs were given medical treatment and separated from the others.

Dogs nursing and their puppies also were separated from the others. They are being cared for at a facility on West Dixie Avenue in Elizabethtown operated by Pet Protection Inc.

Layman said she had a dog that came from a place that had bred puppies for profit in substandard conditions, where females were bred over and over and never left their cages.

"They've never been socialized, never been touched, never been loved," she said.

Animal Control Supervisor Jerry Foley said there is enough space to keep the dogs while they are being held as evidence, and the county has verbal agreements with some Humane Society facilities if animals need to be stored for a time.

The dogs rescued from the trailer aren't being offered for adoption at this time.

Foley said animal control employees and volunteers will do the best they can for the dogs.

The last time Foley saw a similar situation was about 10 years ago, when 76 dogs were seized from a location in Radcliff.

Foley said he wouldn't comment on the specifics of the ongoing case.

In situations in which dogs are bred in substandard conditions, there can be a danger of animals living in their own feces contracting various illnesses common to dogs, he said.

Such situations can be unhealthy for people living there as well, he said.

Roberts was appreciative of the volunteers, local veterinarians and animal control employees for their hard work rounding up the dogs, transporting them to safe locations, processing them, cleaning them and putting them in safe conditions.

"I have nothing but praise for Jerry and all the volunteers who showed up to help and everybody who came," he said.

State bowling qualifiers ready to strike

NATHANIEL BRYAN/The News-Enterprise

The North Hardin Lady Trojans bowling team shows off their 2nd (Mid Kentucky) Region Tournament runner-up trophy Saturday afternoon.

By NATHANIEL BRYAN
nbryan@thenewsenterprise.com

By the time the North Hardin Lady Trojans had arrived home Saturday night from a long day on the lanes competing in the 2nd (Mid Kentucky) Region Tournament at Campbellsville's Phillips Lanes, the North Hardin message marquee outside of the school had already been changed to honor them for the runner-up finish.

That's when it first hit them that it was kind of a big deal.

"I was excited to see that. I know we took pictures of it," junior Emina Hatler said during a break in practice Tuesday afternoon at Dix-E-Town Lanes. Hatler had the Lady Trojans' best individual finish and came within a win in the first round of the five-player stepladder to earn one of the region's four individual berths in the inaugural Ebonite/KHSAA Bowling State Championships, which start today and conclude Friday at Louisville's Executive Strike and Spare. "I'm not too upset about not making it as an individual, but I'd rather go with my team anyway."

Lucas Ward was the same way. The John Hardin junior should have been included Saturday in the eight-player semifinals, but the boys' tournament was over before a scoring correction needed to be made. However, he would have had to bowl way above his average to even have a shot at qualifying for the stepladder.

Regardless, Ward was concerned with helping the Bulldogs finish their season strong. Ward and the region runner-up Bulldogs begin their qualifying at 7:50 this morning, while Hatler and the Lady Trojans start their qualifying at 1:20 in the afternoon.

John Hardin has a leg up on some of the other 15 boys' teams at State as the Bulldogs practiced Sunday at Executive.

"We had two to a lane and got to bowl plenty of games, so we felt we got enough practice in to get a feel for the lanes," said John Hardin senior Anthony Murphy. "I felt really comfortable up there because it is more spacious and I don't feel like I'm crammed up next to somebody bowling."

Cardinals and Spartans face off in West

By JOHN MARSHALL
AP Basketball Writer

PHOENIX — Watching his team commit the same mistake for the third time in less than a minute, Louisville coach Rick Pitino screams, "Stop!" shakes his head in disgust and moves the players into the position he expected them to be in.

Michigan State coach Tom Izzo marches around players much taller than he is, clapping and barking out orders, imploring them to run faster, work harder as they race around the court.

On the same court about an hour apart, Pitino and Izzo provided a few dozen fans at US Airways Center a glimpse into what it's like to play for two of the most demanding — and successful coaches — in college basketball.

"Both of them really demand toughness," Michigan State forward Draymond Green said Wednesday. "And both of them are no-nonsense guys who expect everything to be perfect."

Tonight's West Regional semifinal has the makings of a sizzler in the desert, the fast and furious Cardinals trying to run past the morphable Spartans.

Jones rebounds after UK loss to IU

By COLIN FLY
AP Sports Writer

LEXINGTON — Kentucky forward Terrence Jones is playing good basketball heading into Wildcats' rematch with Indiana.

The sophomore hit a bit of slump after a sub-par performance against the Hoosiers in December.

Jones was heavily criticized for his lackluster play after finishing with four points, one rebound and six turnovers in the Wildcats' 73-72 loss Dec. 10.

He dislocated his left pinky finger in Kentucky's next game and was limited most of the rest of the month as his freshmen teammates carried Kentucky back to No. 1.

Kentucky coach John Calipari still isn't sure why Jones played so poorly against Indiana (27-8).

"I don't know. I hope he keeps playing like he's been, just keep doing what he's been doing," Calipari said. "Whatever you're eating, whatever

Efficiency pays for Hawks

Owens' pitching leads LaRue to 6-1 victory over Elizabethtown

By CHUCK JONES
cjones@thenewsenterprise.com

The word of the night for the LaRue County Hawks was efficient.

Senior Slade Owens pitched efficiently in his complete game performance, not wasting pitches, and the Hawks backed Owens by jumping out to a large lead early on their way to a 6-1 victory over the Elizabethtown Panthers on Wednesday at Panther Baseball Park.

"Slade did an excellent job," Elizabethtown coach Don Pitts said. "He was like a version of Greg Maddux. He was very efficient, which is a sign of a good pitcher."

Owens threw only 69 pitches in seven innings, including 50 for strikes or 72.5 percent. He had two innings where he threw five or fewer pitches. Owens retired the side in the sixth on three pitches and needed only five pitches in the second despite allowing two base runners.

"I threw strikes and just let my team make the plays behind me," Owens said. "To be honest, some days you have it and some days it's a battle to stay in there. Luckily, I had it today. I was able to throw strikes and my defense made the plays."

The Hawks (2-0) made only two errors, only one of which cost as the Panthers scored a meaningless run in the bottom of the seventh to ruin Owens' shutout bid. Owens scattered five hits and one walk, while striking out one.

Meanwhile, the young Panthers (1-3) were done in by their shaky defense and wildness on the mound. They made six errors, walked four and a hit a batter, which opened the door for the LaRue County offense.

"It makes it a lot easier on our defense when we get free bases," LaRue County senior shortstop Kyle Meredith said. "When we can get free bases and score runs, it takes the pressure off our defense. We need to work on getting the bunt down. Our hitting will come, but we need to do a better job on the little things we work on every day."

LaRue County's offense was just as efficient as Owens was on the mound. The Hawks pounced on junior Cannon Pender in the first two innings to build a 5-0 lead although they had only two hits.

With one out, Meredith walked and then stole second and third. Owens followed with a walk but was thrown out trying to steal second. Senior Jesse Johnson walked and stole second when the throw went into center field allowing Meredith to score. Johnson moved to third when senior Wesley Kessinger reached on an error and scored when the Hawks executed a double steal.

Hilltoppers' Bjork headed south, named Mississippi athletic director

By DAVID BRANDT
AP Sports Writer

Ross Bjork has developed a reputation as an up-and-comer in college athletics who specializes in fundraising and isn't afraid to make bold moves with his coaching staff.

That's exactly what Mississippi wanted.

The 39-year-old Bjork was named the Rebels' athletic director Wednesday afternoon and a formal news conference is scheduled for today on campus. Bjork has been the athletic director at Western Kentucky University since March 2010 and also worked in the athletic departments at UCLA, Miami and Missouri.

"While I was not seeking to leave WKU, the opportunity to oversee and manage the athletics department at a historic and prestigious university in the Southeastern Conference was one that we had to examine and ultimately accept," Bjork said in a statement released by Western Kentucky.

The Dodge City, Kan., native will take over for Pete Boone in mid-April. Boone announced his retirement in November after more than 13 years as Mississippi's athletic director.

Ole Miss chancellor Dr. Dan Jones, along with a committee led by former Ole Miss quarterback Archie Manning and FedEx chairman Mike Glenn, made the hire.

"I've spent a lot of time with him,"

Jones said in a statement released by Ole Miss. "Integrity and character are important to me, and I'm very comfortable with his strengths on those attributes. I'm also very pleased with the professional track he's taken in college athletics. He has trained for this job through his education and a steady, upward track in athletic administration, and he's demonstrated a commitment to Ole Miss and to winning on and off the field."

JONES: providing big boost on the boards

you're reading, tell the rest of the guys. He's doing good, he's doing good."

Jones is healthy and playing well for the Wildcats (34-2). He's averaging 14.4 points and 10.4 rebounds over his last five games and looks like the playmaker he would be this season when he was tabbed the Southeastern Conference's preseason Player of the Year.

"I'm just being more aggressive on offense, just trying to attack the rim and just be more physical on offense and defense to get more rebounds," Jones said. "That's what is helping us usually win games is getting more rebounds. So I'm just trying to help get more rebounds."

Jones surprised many when he decided to return for his sophomore season instead of going into the NBA after averaging 15.7 points and 8.8 rebounds as a freshman. Calipari brought in another No. 1 ranked recruiting class that includes starters Anthony Davis, Michael Kidd-Gilchrist and Marquis Teague.

That lessened Jones' needed role as a scorer and the finger injury cost him two games as his numbers have fallen to 12.6

points and 7.2 rebounds per game this year. His play in last year's NCAA Tournament lifted Kentucky to the Final Four.

"He rebounded the ball like crazy," Calipari said. "As a matter of fact, in the game we lost against Connecticut, he had 15 rebounds, and he was rebounding every ball. Much better offensive player than he was a year ago, and now he's still rebounding."

Jones appears confident again after being shaken during those December days. He abandoned at the buzzer after Jones sat on the bench the final 2:59.

"They beat us every way, they were more physical, they were; they played with more intensity, they executed better, made shots that they had to make," Calipari said. "We had a couple of guys literally no show the game. Wasn't just one. You guys got one, but if you watch the tape, there was more like two or three."

Jones looks nothing like a no-show as of late, and his teammates already plan to be looking for him.

"Terrence is being more aggressive on rebounds, looking for his shot more," sophomore Doron Lamb said. "We're going to be going to him a lot."

LOUISVILLE: plays at 7:47 tonight

It also features two of the nation's best short-turn-around coaches, great basketball minds who thrive on the adapt-on-the-fly nature of the NCAA Tournament.

Izzo has been the king of consistency during his 17 seasons in East Lansing, leading the Spartans to the Final Four six times, including three straight from 1999-2001, along with a national championship in 2000. He's led Michigan State to the NCAA Tournament 14 straight years and into the round of 16 in 10 of the past 15 seasons.

There's something else that stands out about Izzo in the NCAA Tournament: his teams rarely lose as the favorite.

The Spartans famously lost to mid-major George Mason in 2006 as a No. 6 seed and to Nevada two years earlier as a seventh seed. All of Michigan State's other losses have come either to a higher seed or in the Final Four.

"I think our leadership has been good most years," Izzo said. "That's why we've had some success."

Pitino's had his share, too.

He has gone to the Final Four five times and is the first coach to take three different teams there, starting with Providence's improbable run in 1987. Pitino also led Kentucky to the 1996 national championship, to ok Louisville to the Final Four in 2005 and picked up his 600th career victory in the Cardinals' opener this season.

Louisville has won at least 20 games in all but one of Pitino's 11 seasons with the Cardinals – they had 19 his first year in 2001-02 – and been to the NCAA Tournament nine of the last 10 years.

"He's a Hall of Fame coach. He's a great coach to play for," Louisville point guard Peyton Siva said. "He teaches us a lot about how he's been to the Sweet 16's, how he's been in the Elite Eight's, Final Fours and national championships. And everybody grasps the fact that he has been there and knows what it takes to be successful."

Pitino's success has come from the frenetic way his teams play.

No matter where he's been, the 59-year-old coach has instituted a push-the-pace style, his teams relying on 3-pointers and defensive pressure to create easy baskets on the break. He started with Providence during its where-did-they-come-from run and brought it with him to Kentucky and later Louisville. The Cardinals were inconsistent at times this season, but picked up steam at the end, winning four games in four days to earn the Big East Conference championship before beating Davidson and New Mexico to open the NCAA Tournament.

"We know he's going to press," Izzo said. "We know they're going to play a lot of zone. Their offense has changed a little bit, but I think for the most part you do get to know programs, and I think these guys have had success for a long time. They tweak their systems, but they don't change them all the time."

HAWKS: move to 2-0

In the second, senior Stephen Carpenter walked and senior Kyle Sheeran walked with two outs. On a hit and run, Meredith delivered a two-run double to center and he scored when Owens reached on an error.

"I was down in the count and I was looking for a curveball," Meredith said. "I saw it coming and I just drove it up the middle to drive in two runs."

That was more than enough for Owens, who was completely in control. Despite the win, LaRue County coach Chris Price said his experienced team must continue to improve.

"We've got to get better," Price said. "It's early but we still need to get better. Those two (errors), we need to make those plays. We did a good job on first and third, but there was one time we got thrown out. We're still learning. We're not perfect by far."

Pender took the loss, allowing three hits, four walks and five runs – two earned – in three innings. He struck out four. Senior Tyler Brandenburg worked four innings, giving up three hits and one unearned run. Pitts said the Panthers can ill afford to make mistakes like they had against the Hawks.

"I think we had unforced mistakes," Pitts said. "Chris does a good job and they put a lot of pressure on a defense by stealing and the hit and run. The bottom line is how you respond to that pressure. We did not respond to it."

BULLDOGS: have tough road

And being up there where it's so wide open, I don't feel like I have to worry about somebody being on my left or my right."

On the bowling coaches' email list serve Sunday night and Monday, coaches from other qualifying teams were complaining about lane availability and here the Bulldogs were with the enormous facility mostly to themselves.

"That place is big, big, big," said John Hardin senior Lucas Ray.

"That place is massive," added Ward of the 68-lane facility, where the Bulldogs returned Tuesday night for one last look at the venue before State gets rolling. "It was good to go and get used to the lanes a little bit. At first when you look at the whole place, it looks deceiving and looks farther than it actually is, but really, it's just the same lane. So I'm glad we went and practiced and I think I'm ready for Thursday."

Both programs hope they're ready, as they'll have their work cut out for them.

The Bulldogs' 935 pin total for six players in region qualifying rank them last among the state qualifiers and their 160.45 baker average was last too – more than 13 pins behind 15th-place Bowling Green. If the seeds from the region tournament held, the 16th-seeded Bulldogs would be looking at the top-seeded Louisville Pleasure Ridge Park Panthers (234.50 individual average, 209.91 team baker average) in the sweet 16 of the best 3-of-5 single-elimination tournament.

What the Bulldogs lack in star power – fellow State qualifiers Louisville Fern Creek, Louisville Trinity and Scott County all have individuals who have rolled 300 games since the season started Nov. 28 – John Hardin makes up for in depth.

John Hardin co-coach Mike Moritz used all 11 players on his roster Saturday during the eight-player qualifying game or the 11 subsequent baker games. In addition to Murphy and Ward, that roster includes senior Dru Inman, juniors Sean Diezman, Alex Humes, Josh Proctor and Chance Strand and freshmen Aaron Gunter, Doug Kim and Daniel Miller.

"It's really amazing to be going to State and it obviously wasn't just me – this is a team effort. We're going to State and I just wanted to help the seniors," Gunter said. "It's been great because even when we're not getting strikes, everyone is still cheering for you to get that spare."

Meanwhile, the Lady Trojans have found a way to mesh an eclectic group. Many of North Hardin's players had participated or still do participate in other extra-curricular events – Hatler does ROTC, senior Tiffany McFee and freshman Jillian Shufelt are on the track team, senior Samantha Atkins starts in right field for the softball team, senior Dakota Grigsby is a former cheerleader and senior Lauren Mansell and eighth-grade sister Regan Mansell are former swimmers – but together, they didn't have a lot of cohesion.

"We started the season strong and I know we're going to end it strong," said senior Stormie Brown, who's also a member of the North Hardin dance team. "Bowling has brought everyone together and helped us turn into a big bowling family and get to know each other. Maybe during school at the very beginning of the school year we would just walk past each other, but now we're all sharing the same experience."

NATHANIEL BRYAN/The News-Enterprise

John Hardin's boys' bowling team finished runner-up at last weekend's 2nd (Mid Kentucky) Region Tournament and will compete in today's team state tournament.

Other team members are freshman Ally Eastman, junior Allie Dennis and seniors Dynique Campbell and Melanie Morales.

"We all didn't really know each other before he came here, but we've grown together to become what we are," said Grigsby, who had a key spare Saturday to help the Lady Trojans finish off their upset of Central Hardin in the semifinals.

Like John Hardin, the Lady Trojans tend to interchange their lineup. But Saturday, they mostly relied on the rotation of Shufelt, Eastman, McFee, Hatler and Atkins.

The Lady Trojans had the ninth-best seeding total (860), but their 135.73 baker average in the region tournament was 14th best among State qualifiers.

On Tuesday, McFee said the enormity of State still hadn't hit the team yet.

"No, not really," she admitted. "But I think we're all starting to get pretty nervous."

BJORK: will try to help Rebels in SEC

One of Bjork's challenges will be helping rebuild Mississippi's football program. The Rebels finished 2-10 last season, 0-8 in the Southeastern Conference. Fourth-year football coach Houston Nutt was fired after the season and Hugh Freeze replaced him in December.

"Ross will bring incredible energy to the Ole Miss family, and I'm looking forward to seeing that grow," Manning said.

Bjork was the youngest athletic director in the Football Bowl Subdivision while at Western Kentucky.

"The future of WKU athletics is bright and the foundation is in place for greatness to occur for years to come," Bjork said. "WKU fans can always count on the Bjork family being proud members of Hilltopper Nation."

Before going to WKU, he spent the previous five years at UCLA, where he directed all fundraising activities.

He previously worked at Miami and Missouri after getting his start at Western Kentucky as an athletic development coordinator in 1996-97.

Now he'll be charged with helping the Rebels compete in the loaded SEC. Ole Miss has an annual athletic budget of about $50 million, which is dwarfed by several other SEC powerhouses. Ole Miss is also in the middle of a $150 million capital campaign that is expected to raise funds for a new basketball arena and renovations to football's Vaught-Hemingway Stadium.

Bjork made decisive moves with coaches at Western Kentucky, despite his relatively short tenure.

After football coach Willie Taggart's 7-5 season this year, Bjork renegotiated his deal and more than doubled the head coach's base salary to $475,000.

He fired men's basketball coach Ken McDonald midseason after a 5-11 start and replaced him with Ray Harper, who later became the permanent coach and one of the highest-paid coaches in the conference with a base salary of $375,000.

The Hilltoppers went on to make a run to the NCAA Tournament, winning four games in four days to earn the automatic qualifier out of the Sun Belt Conference.

"It's been a great run," Bjork said just before the Hilltoppers lost to Kentucky, 81-66 in the second round. "It's great exposure for our university, really all of our teams."

Bjork also fired women's basketball coach Mary Taylor Cowles after this season and had been active in determining her replacement until this past week. That job is expected to start between $150,000 and $175,000.

NFL

Saints coach suspended over bounties

By HOWARD FENDRICH
AP Pro Football Writer

Meting out unprecedented punishment for a crush-for-cash bounty system that targeted key opposing players, the NFL suspended New Orleans Saints head coach Sean Payton without pay for next season and indefinitely banned the team's former defensive coordinator, Gregg Williams.

Payton is the first head coach suspended by the league for any reason, accused of trying to cover up a system of extra cash payouts that NFL commissioner Roger Goodell on Wednesday called "particularly unusual and egregious" and "totally unacceptable."

Sending a message by taking a harsh stand, Goodell also banned Saints general manager Mickey Loomis for the first eight regular-season games next season — believed to be the first time a general manager was suspended by the NFL — and assistant coach Joe Vitt for the first six games.

In addition, Goodell fined the Saints $500,000 and took away their second-round draft picks this year and next.

"We are all accountable and responsible for player health and safety and the integrity of the game. We will not tolerate conduct or a culture that undermines those priorities," said Goodell, whose league faces more than 20 concussion-related lawsuits brought by hundreds of former players. "No one is above the game or the rules that govern it."

According to the league, Payton ignored instructions from the NFL and Saints ownership to make sure bounties weren't being paid. The league also chastised him for choosing to "falsely deny that the program existed," and for trying to "encourage the false denials by instructing assistants to 'make sure our ducks are in a row.'"

All in all, Goodell's ruling is a real blow to the Saints, a franchise that Payton and quarterback Drew Brees revived and led to the 2010 Super Bowl title after decades of such futility that fans wore paper bags over their heads at home games.

Brees reacted quickly to the news on Twitter, writing: "I am speechless. Sean Payton is a great man, coach, and mentor. ... I need to hear an explanation for this

Colts sign free agent lineman Satele

INDIANAPOLIS — Indianapolis Colts general manager Ryan Grigson got the center he wanted to anchor Indianapolis' rebuilt offensive line — and it's not Jeff Saturday.

On Wednesday, the Colts signed Samson Satele, who started 74 career games with the Miami Dolphins and Oakland Raiders. A person with knowledge of the deal said it's a three-year contract worth $10.8 million, with $5 million guaranteed. The person spoke on the condition of anonymity because the team did not announce the terms.

"It's a brand new team," Satele said in a statement issued by Indy. "In talking with coach (Chuck Pagano) and everyone else, it feels like a family. It's a fresh, new start for me and a fresh, new team. I can't wait to get this rolling."

Grigson said Satele "has all the necessary traits to be one of the top centers in the NFL."

"We wanted him, and we got him," he said. "We couldn't be happier that he will punishment."

The Saints now must decide who will coach the team in Payton's place — his suspension takes effect April 1 — and who will make roster moves while Loomis is out. There was no immediate word from the Saints, but two candidates to take over coaching duties are defensive coordinator Steve Spagnuolo and offensive coordinator Pete Carmichael Jr. Spagnuolo has NFL head coaching experience; Carmichael does not, but has been with the club since 2006.

When the NFL first made its investigation public March 2, Williams admitted to — and apologized for — running the program while in charge of the Saints' defense. He was hired in January by the St. Louis Rams; head coach Jeff Fisher said Wednesday he'll probably use a committee of coaches to replace Williams in 2012.

Goodell will review Williams' status after the upcoming season and decide whether he can return.

now be a Colt for years to come and help us reach our ultimate goal."

Bengals sign Green-Ellis

CINCINNATI — A person familiar with the negotiations said former New England Patriots running back BenJarvus Green-Ellis has agreed to a deal with the Cincinnati Bengals, who need someone to replace Cedric Benson.

Green-Ellis spent four seasons with New England, carrying 181 times for 667 yards in 2011 with 11 touchdowns. Various reports had him agreeing to a three-year deal.

The Bengals are expected to announce the signing today after final details are completed, said the source speaking on condition of anonymity because the club hadn't confirmed it.

Cincinnati decided not to re-sign Benson, a free agent who disliked his role in the Bengals' new West Coast offense last season. Benson was the Bengals' leading rusher each of the last four seasons. They also have running backs Bernard Scott and Brian Leonard.

The Associated Press

"I accept full responsibility for my actions," Williams said in a statement issued by the Rams. "I will continue to cooperate fully with the league and its investigation and ... I will do everything possible to re-earn the respect of my colleagues, the NFL and its players in hopes of returning to coaching in the future."

After the NFL made clear that punishments were looming, Payton and Loomis took the blame for violations that they acknowledged "happened under our watch" and said Saints owner Tom Benson "had nothing to do" with the bounty pool, which reached as much as $50,000 during the season the Saints won their championship.

The NFL said the scheme involved 22 to 27 defensive players; it targeted opponents included quarterbacks Aaron Rodgers, Cam Newton, Brett Favre and Kurt Warner. "Knockouts" were worth $1,500 and "cart-offs" $1,000, with payments doubled or tripled for the playoffs.

"The bounty thing is completely unprofessional. I'm happy the league has made it known it won't be tolerated," said left tackle Jordan Gross, Newton's teammate on the Carolina Panthers. "To think that something like that would happen — guys trying to hurt someone to make a few extra bucks — is just appalling. I mean we have a lot on the line, every single one of us. ... You don't want to see anyone taken out a game."

According to the league, Saints defensive captain Jonathan Vilma offered $10,000 to any player who knocked then-Minnesota Vikings quarterback Favre out of the 2010 NFC championship game. The Saints were flagged for roughing Favre twice in that game, and the league later said they should have received another penalty for a brutal high-low hit from Remi Ayodele and Bobby McCray that hurt Favre's ankle. He was able to finish the game, but the Saints won in overtime en route to the franchise's only Super Bowl appearance.

All payouts for specific performances in a game, including interceptions or causing fumbles, are against NFL rules. The NFL warns teams against such practices before each season, although in the aftermath of the revelations about the Saints, current and former players from various teams talked about that sort of thing happening frequently — although not on the same scale as was found in New Orleans.

In a memo to the NFL's 32 teams, Goodell ordered owners to make sure their clubs are not offering bounties now. Each club's principal owner and head coach must certify in writing by March 30 that no pay-for-performance system exists.

Punishment for any Saints players involved will be determined later, because the league is still reviewing the case with the NFL Players Association.

"While I will not address player conduct at this time, I am profoundly troubled by the fact that players — including leaders among the defensive players — embraced this program so enthusiastically and participated with what appears to have been a deliberate lack of concern for the well-being of their fellow players," Goodell said.

Forcing fleas to flee

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Dear Heloise: I am trying to get rid of fleas in my home. I do not want to use harsh chemicals. Please help me. — Denise, via email

■ Happy to help, because no one wants fleas in the home. Here are some chemical-free things you can try:

■ First, vacuum your home daily, and place a few mothballs in the bag to kill the fleas. You are supposed to throw away the bag after each use, but as long as you are aware, you may not have to.

■ Wash the doghouse, if you have one, with salt water, and place fresh pine needles or cedar shavings under a pet's bed. Check the bedding daily for flea activity.

■ Look for a dog shampoo containing a pyrethrin (derived from chrysanthemum flowers) base. It kills fleas and is safe for dogs.

■ To catch fleas, wrap adhesive tape around your fingers with the sticky side out, and they will stick to the tape. Or place a shallow pan on the floor filled with soapy water. Use a 25-watt lamp above the pan. The light will attract the fleas, but when they jump, they will land in the water.

Pest-control experts recommend that you check your pet daily for fleas. Then you need to treat your inside and outside living areas using both chemicals and natural treatments. If you have a large infestation, consult a pest-control professional.

PERFUME STRIPS. Dear

Heloise: When I receive the paper advertisement for perfume with the fragrance strips on the side, I put a slit in the bottom of my tissue box and insert several of them. In a day or so, you have fragrant tissues.

I always read your column. I learn so much and share with others. — Barbara S., Bowmansdale, Pa.

■ I visited your lovely city for a home show a while back and met a lot of nice people. Thanks for reading the column.

EASIER RECYCLING. Dear Heloise: Our city provides a curbside recycling program. However, the bin is unsightly, and we keep it in the garage. Guests do not realize that we recycle, and I constantly have to ask them not to throw certain items in the garbage.

I bought a small garbage bin, labeled it for recycling only and have it next to the kitchen garbage can. No more questions, and the recycling is separated to be carried out once daily. — Marilyn G., via email

LAUNDRY REMINDER. Dear Heloise: I check all pockets before putting items into the washer. I often find tissues, paper towels, etc., in my husband's pockets. I have made a habit of always checking pockets before putting them into the washing machine. I also make sure to clean the filter screen after each load. — Willa O., Bella Vista, Ark.

REPURPOSED CD. Dear Heloise: I put compact discs that no longer work because of scratches in my bicycle spokes as reflectors. — Rita in Hawaii

PEOPLE

■ Get ready for more drama from Sylvester, Twan and Pimp Lucius — R. Kelly is delivering more chapters of "Trapped in the Closet."

The outrageous musical series started off as five videos for the R&B singer's dramatic cliffhanger songs in 2007. It quickly became a cult classic, and he added more chapters, put the accompanying videos on a DVD and teamed up with IFC to premiere it.

For the next chapters, Kelly is teaming up with IFC again. He said in a statement Wednesday: "The Alien is back and It has brought friends along."

■ "The Hunger Games" may be about kids who are forced to fight to the death on live TV, but one of its stars, Liam Hemsworth, said the violence in the film isn't for nothing.

"It's about kids in a horrible situation and there's this girl who overcomes it and gives hope to everyone and they come together to do something about it," he said.

Hemsworth plays Gale Hawthorne, friend of Katniss Everdeen, played by Jennifer Lawrence. His role in the first "Hunger Games" is small but is more prevalent in the two stories that follow.
